

“The Learned-It-In Queens Communications Playbook – Winning Against Digital Distraction”

At a time when we are overwhelmed with digital distractions, the new book from Julienne Ryan, outlines eight (8) winning plays to promote calm communication and reduce conflict with quirky humor that will keep you smiling.

With common sense and humor, Ryan calls on us to find our virtual “Front Stoop” (A Queens, New York word for steps) and seek places and moments for an “in your space conversation” versus an “in your face” discourse. “The Learned-It-In Queens Communications Playbook – Winning Against Digital Distraction” is a well needed visual antidote to our communication challenges. The book is designed to be a communications bridge builder by showing the challenges we share no matter what our background, education, or role. Any person who ever blurted out “What did he just say to me?” and promptly fired off an angry e-mail or text will benefit from the calm, practical advice.

What Others Are Saying

“This small, highly entertaining book is packed with great advice...I think Jules’ most important achievement, however, is managing to codify and explain something that she does naturally. In many cases, when you try to learn something from a ‘natural,’ they both underestimate how hard it is to pick up their skills and also have trouble being specific about how those skills can be developed. She does both extremely well, and in a way that makes her communications advice practical and memorable” Kelly Barner, Owner & Managing Director Buyer’s Meeting Point.

[<https://www.buyersmeetingpoint.com/bmp-book-reviews/entry/book-review-the-learned-it-in-queens-communications-playbook-winning-against-digital-distraction> __title__ Book Review: "The Learned-It-In-Queens Communications Playbook - Winning Against Digital Distraction"]

"Her playbook has that unique combination of insight and humor, which makes it a must-read for anyone who wants to up their communication game. She delivers her 'plays' with a personal touch that makes them memorable, relatable and, most importantly, actionable" Jerome Deroy, CEO at Narativ, Inc.

“The Learned-It-In Queens Communications Playbook – Winning Against Digital Distraction” is a chapter book for adults who are interested in improving how they connect and communicate with the people around them.

Available at Amazon.com

77 pp - ISBN: 9798693052048

$15.00 tpb $9.99 E-book

Publishing date: October 2nd, 2020

About the Author

Besides being a writer, Julienne is an organizational storyteller, a keynote speaker, a facilitator, a soft-skills trainer, coach, and humorist. Married for decades to a Dublin, Irishman, most of what she has learned about communicating, patience, and performing comes from living with him, a man who never met a sentence he couldn’t make longer. She's been trying to get a word in edgewise ever since.

Julienne has presented at national and regional conferences utilizing her storytelling and humorist gifts to engage, and entertain her clients. You can reach out directly: jryan@jryanpartners.com or 914-310-1638. To learn more about her keynotes, workshops, and practice, visit her website at www.jryanpartners.com

Contact Information

Julienne B. Ryan

J. Ryan Partners - Be engaged at work

<http://https://jryanpartners.com/>

(914) 310-1638